Director's Notes

Everyone loves a good murder mystery with all the favourite characters of a whodunit. In a new take on the genre Peter Gordon has delivered an hilarious comedy spoof on the very best of Agatha Christie.

Murdered to Death has long been one of my favourite plays and so I was delighted to be offered the opportunity to direct it. From a child I have always enjoyed detective stories with Inspector Clousseau being one of my favourite characters. That being said, you will see why I have been so drawn to the superb writing of the author Peter Gordon. Inspector Pratt rivals Clousseau with his incompetence and ridiculous theories.

Set in the lounge of a country manor house in the 1930s, the play features a gathering of assorted house guests who have come to renew their acquaintance with the widowed Mildred and her niece, Dorothy. Stiff-upper-lipped Colonel Craddock and his wife Margaret, Pierre, a shady art dealer and the aristocratic Elizabeth Hartley-Trumpington are the guests. Also staying, more or less at her own invitation, is Joan Maple an amateur sleuth who it seems attracts murder like a magnet. They are all attended by Mildred's butler Bunting.

When a murder does occur, Inspector Pratt and Constable Thomkins arrive to handle (and I use that word loosely) the case. What follows is the chaotic investigation and interrogation of the suspects.

Murdered to Death is the first in the Inspector Pratt trilogy so please do let us know if you would like to see more of the bungling Inspector Pratt. I sincerely hope you enjoy watching this comedy as much as we have done rehearsing it.

Q. Why couldn't the two elephants go swimming together?

A. Because they only had one pair of trunks!

We Are Trinity Players Barnsley!

We are always happy to meet new members so if you have a longing to tread the boards or get involved in any way, come along. We meet every Wednesday evening at this hall BUT!... Don't complain if you come along to do a bit of painting and end up on stage in a chicken costume. You have been warned!
